Just before play commenced the class of 1900, celebrating their triennial. marched on the field with a long line of cambric on each side of their lock-step procession, representing a huge-serpent. Both Patton and Bowman warmed up for Yale, and it was evidently a toss up which of the Yale twirlers would go into the box for Yale. Patton was announced as the choice at the lest moment. The teams played as follows:

First Inning.

Coolidge drew a pass to first. Randall made first on balls. Stephenson hit a long fly, which Cote muffed, but threw to second in time to catch Randall. Matthews singled to right. Stephenson reaching third and scoring on an infield bit to O'Rourke. Ctarkson out at first. Stillman took first on balls and stole scoond. R. Kernan touled out to Chittenden. One run.

Coburn went into pitch. Clarkson going to left field. O'Brien, for Yale, out on an infield fly to Randall. Metcalf was left by pitched sall, taking first. Barnwell hit to Courn, who threw to second, but not in alms to catch Metcalf, who stole third and scored on Chittenden's infield hit, on which he was retired at finds. O'Rourke filed out to right field. One run.

The bookmakers were more excited before the third race were restricted by he was short. Pulsus is one of the last of the Top Gallants. He ran his race, five and a half furlongs of the Futurity course, in 1.66 2-5, within a second and a fitth of the record held by Nasturtium. Pulsus won in a gallop, and his performance was an eye-opener.

F. R. Hitchcock's three-year-old co Sergeant, entered in two races at Sheepshead yesterday, had to be with drawn, owing to injuries received early in the day. While being given a breeze through the stretch in the morning he struck himself, injuring his foreleg so hally that it was thought at first he had broken down. It will be some weeks before he can be sent to the post.

"Memoriam had no speed in any part of the race, and after I saw that a further drive was useless I eased her up." This was the way Jockey Odom explained the poor showing made by W. B. Jennings's filly in The Rosebuds. This filly came from San Francisco un-beaten, and her preparatory trials for the stake decided yesterday were good the stake decided yesterday were good enough to warrant the belief that she would give a good account of herself. In her three starts at the Ingleside course Memoriam showed a world of speed, and in a three-and-a-half-furions, dash, run last February, she stepped in it 1-2 seconds, hanging up a new track record for the distance.

There were two rumors floated concerning Andr Williams in the fifth race.

cerning Andy Williams in the fifth race. One was that he was lame and the other was that he was not. The field other was that he was not. The field bookies in the main came to the conclusion that it must be so, and after boosting his price from sixes to eights, dropped it to sixes again, and then raised it to eights, although if you were a non-believer in Andy Williams's lame ness you could have sixes if you wanted it. There was no especial need for lame excuses when Andy Williams got to racing, which was just opposite the field stand.

Claude, M. J. Daly's steady little threeyear-old, just returned from his journey to Chicago, where he went to battle with the greatest colts of his age in the West, won the feature of the opening day's card at Highland Park yesterday afternoon when he galloped home an easy winner in the Frontier Stakes. The conditions called for three-year-olds at a mile and a furlong. Claude picked up-127 pounds, and after racing under a mand, and running away from his field as though they were anchored in the final quarter, won in a common canter by fitteen lengths. Sir Gallant, the early pacemaker, was second, four lengths in front of Bank Street.

(Special to The Evening World.)

S. POUCHKEPPSIE. June 23.—Coach Courtney, of Cornell, has departed from his usual custom and is having his men row twice a day. They never did this at Ithaca, and the coach said the first day he arrived here that they would probably row only in the evening, adding that if his men were seen to row oftener that it might be inferred that they needed the practice. The Cornell crews were out twice yesterday and rowed a total of eighteen miles, only one crew working harder—Syracuse, which covered twenty-one miles during the content of the coach said the first they needed the practice. The Cornell crews were out twice yesterday and rowed a total of eighteen miles, only one crew working harder—Syracuse, which covered twenty-one miles during the content of the champions weight champion, made a chopping-block of him for six rounds. Since Dougherty lost the title which he received from Terry McGovern when the latter had outgrown the bantam-weight limit, his path has been a downward one. Several times he has attempted to regain the title, but each time he has been an easier mark than in his one crew working harder—Syracuse, has been an easier mark than in his which covered twenty-one miles during previous attempt.
